

Purpose

This 2-day program provides course content that will enable the physician, nurse, or healthcare professional to recognize and discuss the diagnosis, treatment and management strategies necessary to successfully provide patient care and promote community health. This continuing education activity will advocate best practices for care delivery and community safety.

By attending this program, participants should be able to:

- List important infectious diseases and their relevance to clinical medicine and public health in the United States
- Discuss the inter-relationships among the infectious disease continuum
- Review current status of communicable diseases in West Virginia
- Explain the socioeconomic and sociocultural dynamics of communicable diseases
- Discuss future communicable disease trends and issues
- Describe the medical, socioeconomic and behavioral prevention efforts for infectious diseases and the public health system
- Describe the functions of the local and state health departments in an outbreak response

Who Should Attend

Physicians, nurses, pharmacists, mid-level providers, social workers, residents/interns, medical, nursing, and allied health students and other interested healthcare professionals. No prerequisites are required.
